SUMMER 2019
15 - 26 JULY

Europe and the wider world face complex, multifaceted and fundamental security challenges at an ever-expansive scale. Whether it is 'new threats' such as cybersecurity, the impact of environmental degradation on security and livelihoods, the societal impacts of the impending 'robotics and artificial intelligence revolution' or the resurgence of 'classical threats', such as nuclear proliferation, arms races, regional conflicts, information warfare, hybrid warfare and the challenges of peacekeeping, peacebuilding and conflict resolution, the next generation of students and analysts must be literate in the analytical tools and policy-oriented solutions to a wide range of security problems.

To this end, the Global Governance Institute (GGI) -an independent international think tank based in Brussels- the Belgian Royal Military Academy and a network of senior scholars and policy-makers from international organizations (such as NATO, the European Union and the United Nations) have teamed up to deliver a unique 10-day intensive summer school in the heart of Europe.

This summer school brings together theoretical and policy-oriented perspectives from peace studies, security studies and strategic studies. Students will learn first-hand from some of the leading scholars and senior practitioners about major security challenges and how to apply concrete policy solutions in an integrative manner.

Programme Content

THEORETICAL PERSPECTIVES: AN INTRODUCTION

During the foundation sessions, students will study the major theories in the fields of security, peace and strategic studies and will acquire the ability to analyze, assess and evaluate major assumptions behind core paradigms and policy decisions. Sessions on peace, security and strategic studies combined with an introduction to geopolitics will allow students to conduct a thorough analysis of contemporary security issues from a European and Global perspective.

THE INSTITUTIONS: THE MAJOR ACTORS

With the help of a variety of lectures and in-depth expert seminars students will be given both a critical academic and honest internal perspective on the history, policies and outcomes of the major international organizations present in Brussels that deal with European and global security issues. Students will understand that almost every organization tries to tackle a large number of security problems but that none of them can deal with all these problems on their own, necessitating comprehensive and integrative approaches.

MAJOR ISSUES & CHALLENGES

Once students have understood core theoretical explanations as well as the opportunities and limitations of the major actors and tools, a variety of interactive lectures, seminars and exercises will be provided to allow students to analyze the main peace, security and strategic challenges that policy-makers face today and will in all likelihood face in the near future.

Ranging from 'traditional' challenges, such as war and conflict, geopolitical rivalries, terrorism, global economic governance and the promotion of human rights, the summer school will also explore more recent issues, such as cybersecurity, artificial intelligence and the robotics revolution as well as environmental security, the migration-security nexus and the impact of populism and extremism on security.

POTENTIAL SOLUTIONS & PRACTICAL SKILLS

The summer school will challenge students to not only ask the right questions, but also to collectively think about innovative, yet implementable policy solutions. Senior practitioners and think tank experts will share their insights into their policy work, scenario-building and 'blue sky' thinking. Students will also receive training on diplomatic mediation and negotiation as well as rare insights into the inner workings of international policy-making.

DEEPENING AND APPLYING YOUR UNDERSTANDING: SIMULATING THE INTEGRATIVE APPROACH

At the end of the intensive 10 days, students will apply and test their knowledge and understanding with the help of an interactive simulation. Students will be guided by experts from the field and will work in groups on a major issue related to global peace, security and strategy-making, through the lenses of governments, NGOs and international organizations.

CULTURAL AND SOCIAL ACTIVITIES & STUDY TRIPS

Experiential learning and networking will also take place outside the walls of the lecture hall.

To this end, the 10-day intensive summer school also includes social gatherings, the exploration of Brussels and its wider neighbourhood as well as study trips to the European Parliamentarium and sites of interest. The summer school opens and closes with a welcome and 'stay in touch' reception and BBQ.
